He focuses his practice on commercial real estate transactions and leads the land use, zoning, and development team. Michael has more than 20 years of experience as a real estate attorney, having successfully represented clients in hundreds of real estate transactions.

Michael drafts, reviews, and negotiates real estate purchase agreements, leases, easement agreements, and loan documents on behalf of his clients and discusses key provisions and alternatives with them. He coordinates and reviews title work, surveys, environmental assessments, property condition assessments, and other due diligence matters and provides practical advice regarding significant problems and realistic solutions. Michael's background includes more than a decade serving as an assistant city attorney, working closely with municipal planners, community development directors, and civil engineers regarding commercial, industrial, and residential development projects. He has drafted development contracts, planned unit development agreements, and ordinance amendments; chaired a planning commission and conducted public hearings regarding applications for subdivision, platting, and development approvals; and chaired a board of adjustment and appeals, conducted public hearings regarding applications for variances and conditional use permits, and heard appeals of administrative decisions.
